SAFETY

WE HAVE NO IDEA IF WE ARE GOING OVER THE LEGAL WEIGHT LIMIT OUR VEHICLE IS DESIGNED TO TOW

 SOLUTION: It's crucial to be within the towing weight limits so be sure to measure it with a simple weight gauge before you take off on your trip

You can easily measure the ball weight on single and twin axle RVs with the Milenco Ball Weight Gauge. The Milenco Precision Calibrated Ball Weight Gauge has been manufactured using unique materials so that its calibration remains accurate even after 1000 uses. The scale is clear and goes up to 400 kgs and is accurate to within 8 kgs.

Tow Ball Load is the proportion of the trailer weight that is applied to the rear of the tow vehicle. A vehicle's Ball Load specification will be found in the vehicle's handbook and will be listed as a weight in kilograms or as a percentage of the trailer's ATM.

Ball Load specifications are often around 10% of the maximum towing mass specification however, this isn't always the case – some may have a lower Ball Load while others may have a higher Ball Load. European vehicles in particular can have quite low allowable Ball Loads in relation to their towing capacity. Too little Ball Load can cause the trailer to become unstable and too much can be detrimental to the tow vehicle's durability as well as affecting its stability, steering and braking.
